STARRS Major Themes

- America is under assault by a dangerous Marxist ideology—the same ideology that America spent trillions and hundreds of thousands of lives fighting against in the 20th century.
- This Marxist ideology in the name of critical race theory has invaded our institutions: academia, media, and government, to include the military
- We consist of Americans who fought against Marxism and are doing what we can to alert the public to this danger and to combat it.

Welcome From Our President

Thank you for your interest in Stand Together Against Racism and Radicalism in the Services, Inc. (STARRS). We are a newly formed corporation (our application for 501(c)3 tax-exempt status has been filed and is pending approval). We are dedicated to maintaining an apolitical military, preventing the introduction of Critical Race Theory (CRT) into the US Armed Forces and educating the American people of the dangers of neo-Marxist ideology.

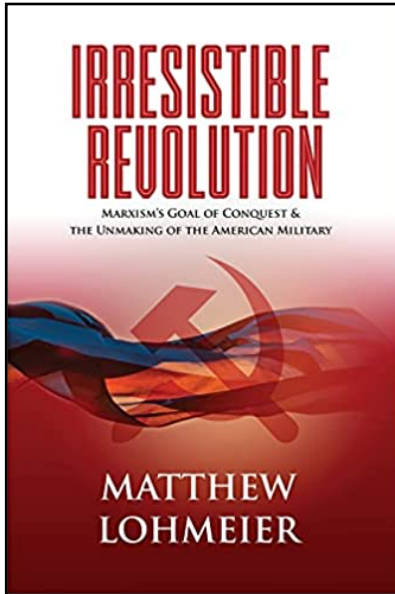

CRT is simply Marxism repackaged in new terms and is ultimately an ideological tool used to divide people and society. We believe unity, not diversity, is our strength.

Knowledge, facts and education are fundamental tools necessary to prevent further intrusion of neo-Marxism ideological subversion into all facets of American life. We encourage all STARRS supporters to study CRT, share their knowledge and publicly call attention to it whenever it surfaces.

We will update you as we move forward, implement our strategic plans and achieve new milestones. We hope you will support STARRS and consider joining our efforts to block the elements of CRT and other neo-Marxist ideology from invading the US armed services and American society.

Finally, we have experienced rapid growth and are in need of not just supporters, but active supporters. If you think you would like to join our efforts or have any questions or comments, please contact us at contactstarrs@protonmail.com or visit our website at www.starrs.us

Our Educational Mission In Action

Lt Col Lohmeier's recent removal from his command as a result of publishing his book and discussing it in a podcast is disheartening. However, it has served to garner significant attention from portions of the media, giving STARRS the opportunity to reach large audiences with our message (which is in line with his). Links to recent interviews are posted on our website and we will continue to post interviews as they happen, so check the site periodically.

As veterans, we have always believed our military strives to manifest MLK's dream of a colorblind society that values people based on their character and shared commitment to American values. The essence of military service is that our uniform and shared mission supersedes groupings by individual identities of color, class, religion, or gender. Service members are unified through their commitment to defending the United States and our constitution against all enemies, foreign and domestic.

This isn't to say that the military is perfect. Like any other human endeavor, it is comprised of people who bring their biases and prejudices with them. But the military knows this; hence, its constant emphasis on small group leadership (e.g., platoons, flights, squadrons, battalions, etc.), reinforcement of values, teamwork, and personal accountability. We strive for continual improvement.

CRT is moving the military in the wrong direction by undoing centuries of work to foster a team-centered culture. Instead, CRT programs emphasize differences among service members, elevates one group over another, and imposes a demand for people to feel guilty about their identity and background.

Such initiatives destroy the fabric of military service and drives a wedge into the heart of unit cohesiveness that otherwise unites a remarkably diverse population in common purpose and identity. Emphasizing the differences is a metastasizing cancer that corrodes the good order and discipline that is an absolute necessity for an effective military. Tragically, CRT also leads to people hating themselves, each other and their country. Why would anyone risk their life for people and a country they hate?

A Call To Action

We thank you for expressing interest in STARRS and encourage you to take an active role. Engage your elected representatives at the local, state and national levels and express your concerns to them. Educate the population in your area by speaking and by writing editorials for local papers, talking to school boards and encouraging others to join you and us.

If you have experienced the impact of this festering ideology and would like to share your story and observations feel free to reach out to our editor, Tracey, at starrsnewsletter@protonmail.com.

Lt Col Matthew Lohmeier recently self-published a book explaining what Marxism is and how it is invading the United States military and why this is devastating for the future of our constitutional republic. We encourage you to read this book to gain a better understanding of what is going on and how it will impact our country.

Back cover:

Pundits often seem perplexed by current policy decisions being made in our country. But our apparent missteps are part of a long standing plan, patiently and methodically pursued by those intent on the overthrow of the US government and its replacement with a communist dictatorship. Unfortunately, many of those now furthering that agenda do so unwittingly.

After becoming aware of the Marxist conquest of American society, you will never again look at things the same way. Mainstream media, social media, the public education system, including the universities, as well as federal agencies have all become vessels of various schools of thought that are rooted in Marxist ideology—an ideology bent on the destruction of America's history, of Western tradition, specifically Judeo-Christian values, and of patriotism and conservatism. The problem has become systemic, a tragedy considering that the defeat of Marxist-communist ideology was the very cause against which our nation spent great treasures of blood and iron during much of the twentieth century.
